About 18 months ago, Tom Paxton, one of America's finest songwriter-singers, told me with great excitement of a song he had just heard and learned. He called it "the most beautiful song he had ever heard." It was called "Both Sides Now" and was written by a young Canadian songwriter, Joni Mitchell. The melody struck me as quite remarkable and the lyrics immediately memorable. Note these excerpts. .

'Rows and flows of angel hair And ice cream castles in the air And feather canyons ev'rywhere I've looked at clouds that way

But now they only block the sun They rain and snow on ev'ryone So many things I would have done But clouds got in my way

I've looked at clouds from both sides now From up and down, and still somehow It's cloud's illusions I recall I really don't know clouds at all...

. I've looked at love from both sides now From give and take. and still somehow

It's love's illusions I recall I really don't know love at all. . .

From win and lose and still somehow It's life's illusions I recall from both sides now

. . I've looked at life

I really don't know life at all" The song has had great success. It has been recorded by more than 50 artists and recently became a popular hit in a version by Judy Collins Joni Mitchell did not record it herself on her first album
